SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Flight of Time. Flight of Time.
Faintly flow, thou falling river.
Like a dream that dies away;
Pown to occan gliding ever,
Keep thy calm unruffled way;
Time, with such a silent motion,
Floats along on wings of air,
To eternity's dark ocean,
Burying all its treasures there.

Roses bloom, and then they wither:
Checks are bright, then fade and die;
Shapes of light are wafted hither—
Then, like visions, harry by;
Quick as clouds at evening driven
O'er the many-color'd west,
Years are bearing us to heaven,
Home of happiness and rest.

What Month Shall It Be? Married in January's hear and rime,
Widowed you'll be before your prime,
darried in February's sleety weather,
Life you'll tread in tune together.
Married when March winds shrill and roar,

Your bome will lie on a foreign shore.
Married 'neath April's changeful skies,
A checkered path before you lies.
Married when bees o'er May blossoms

filt,
Strangers around your board will sit.
Married in month of roses—June,
Life will be one long honeymoon.
Married in July, with flowers ablaze,
Bitter-sweet memories in other days.
Married in August's heat and drowse,
Lover and friend in your chosen spouse.
Married in golden September's slow,
Smooth and serenc your life will flow,
Married when leaves in October, thin,
Toll and hardship for you begin.

Double Wedding.

West End and Richmond society in general was interested in a double wedding celebration, taking place, at 6 P. M. yesterday, at No. 1005 Floyd Avenue, when Miss Mary Edna Blanton, daughter the Avenue West West West Warsh Blanton. when Miss Mary Edna Blanton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Warren Blanton, became the bride of Mr. Richard Edwards Filkinton, of Washington, D. C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pilkinton, and Miss Dalsy Taylor, of Staunton, Va. daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Taylor, was given in marriage to Mr. Claude Eugene Blanton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Blanton, of this city.

The double ceremony was impressively performed by the Rev. John T. Bosman, of Norfolk, Va., and the Rev. L. B. Betty, of Park Place Methodist Episcopal Church.

Floral decoration for the drawing rooms, where the marriage altar was arected, was in white and green, white roses and asters, in relief against a setting of paims and smilax. In the ding-room the green was relieved by the beautiful flushing of La France roses. Thilows orchestra played the wedding march, and a choice selection of appropriate and beautiful airs. Little Miss Laura Alice Blanton, sister of the bride, and Josephine Willard Bronson, of Washington, D. C., dressed in charming frocks of white organdy and val lace, attended the brides as ribbon girls.

The two grooms entered together from the front and met their brides, who approached the altar from the rear drawing room. Floral decoration for the drawing

Miss Blanton was gowned in white crepe de chine, trimmed in point lace, white tulle vell, and carried a shower of lilles of the valley. She wore a pearl and dla-mond brooch, a bridal gift from Mr.

Pilkinton.

Miss Taylor was in white chiffon above white liberty silk, with garpiture of point lace. The folds of her veil were caught with lilles of the valley, a great cluster of which formed her bouquet.

A reception was held after the ceremony, with the dining-room in Moesta's charge. A large number of elegant wedding gifts was displayed.

THE WELL OF ST. KEYNE.

By ROBERT SOUTHEY.

Other selections from this author, his portrait, autograph and biographical eketch, have already been printed in this series.

WELL there is in the west country, And a clearer one never was seen; There is not a wife in the west country But has heard of the well of St. Keyne.

An oak and an elme tree stand beside, And behind doth an ash tree grow, And a willow from the bank above Droops to the water below.

A traveler came to the well of St. Keyne; Joyfully he drew nigh, For from cock-crow he had been traveling, And there was not a cloud in the sky.

He drank of the water so cool and clear. For thirsty and hot was he: And he sat down upon the bank Under the willow tree.

There came a man from the house hard by At the well to fill his pail; On the well-side he rested it, And he bade the stranger hall.

"Now, art thou a bachelor, stranger?" quoth he; "For an if thou hast a wife, The happiest draught thou hast drank this day

That ever thou didst in thy life.

"Or has thy good woman, if one thou hast, Ever here in Cornwall been? For an if she have, I'll venture my life, She has drank of the well of St. Keyne."

"I have left a good woman who never was here," The stranger he made reply;

"But that my draught should be the better for that, I pray you answer me why."

"St. Keyne," quoth the Cornishman, "many a time Drank of this crystal well; And before the angel summoned her; She laid on the water a spell.

"If the husband of this gifted well Shall drink before his wife, A happy man henceforth is he, For he shall be master for life.

"But if the wife should drink of it first, ---God help the husband ther The stranger stoopt to the well of St. Keyne, And drank of the water again.

"You drank of the well, I warrant, betimes?" He to the Cornishman said; But the Cornishman smilled as the stranger spake, And sheepishly shook his head.

"I hasten'd as soon as the wedding was done, And left my wife in the porch; But l'faith she had been wiser than me, For she took a bottle to church."

Mr. Kester felt the necessity of English atmosphere to assist him in the completion of a play that he has in hand. Augill Castle is said to fulfil his requirements. It is situated in Westmoreland county, England, "nine miles from anywhere," in the midst of a rural district, noted for its beauty. It is an ancient place with a history, and is yet suited to the needs of comfortable occupation.
